

Welcome to my cultural awareness training

Berlin

03/06/2024

It's all about the backpack

Working agreement

Regular breaks

Devices/work

English

Share experiences

Interactive

Las Vegas

Time boxes

Positive purpose/
intent

Kind

Lazy

Chaotic

Unprogressive

Bad listener

Bad back

Unreliable

Cautious

Where do you see yourself?

A. When working on projects, it is most preferable to discuss each point in detail and systematically although recognising it is important not to be inflexible.

A. When working on projects, it is preferable to discuss each point generally responding to changing priorities although recognising it is important not to be inconclusive or vague.

B. It is critical to find the one critical path to achieve. Objectives and therefore advanced planning is an essential investment and sequential activities emphasised; but there is recognition that this should not be too rigid.

B. There are various paths to help achieve and therefore options should be kept open for as long as possible and parallel activities emphasised; but there is recognition that coordination and decision-making is required.

C. Focused commitment to schedules and promptness are preferred and valued – but we don't forget we are dealing with people and special circumstances.

C. Focused commitment to people as potential sources of new ideas are preferred and valued – but we don't forget the need for meeting our goals within realistic time frames.

D. Carefully structured and timed agendas decided before meetings are critical for the best outcome, although new points can be added with the consensus of everyone.

D. Key issues as starting points and evolving agendas during meetings are critical for the best outcome, although the need to make the best use of time available is clearly recognised.

E. The best project plans are produced when everyone agrees to a plan which is executed in detail, but, of course, we are open to taking new inputs, ideas and circumstances into consideration.

E. The best project plans are produced when everyone agrees to an informal plan which evolves according to new inputs, circumstances and ideas, but, of course, we will always keep track of the progress of the project towards its goals.

F. To be successful in teamwork we need to concentrate and be focused on pre-agreed goals and work methods, changing these only when it is essential.

F. To be successful in teamwork we need to be open to new possibilities and be receptive to the need to change direction and methodology if this will help us achieve our goals.

G. Useful information is mainly acquired through presentations, formal exchange sessions, written communication or internal communication systems – although informal channels are also useful.

G. Useful information is mainly acquired through informal verbal communication between trusted colleagues and contacts – although formal channels are also useful.

H. Being late for an appointment among colleagues should not be tolerated because lateness is a clear sign of disrespect – but, of course, there are always exceptional circumstances.

H. Being late for an appointment with colleagues can be tolerated because it is based on an understanding that priorities change, preventing us from being together at the same time – but, of course, the intention is always to be on time if possible.

Where do you see your culture?

A. When working on projects, it is most preferable to discuss each point in detail and systematically although recognising it is important not to be inflexible.

A. When working on projects, it is preferable to discuss each point generally responding to changing priorities although recognising it is important not to be inconclusive or vague.

B. It is critical to find the one critical path to achieve. Objectives and therefore advanced planning is an essential investment and sequential activities emphasised; but there is recognition that this should not be too rigid.

B. There are various paths to help achieve and therefore options should be kept open for as long as possible and parallel activities emphasised; but there is recognition that coordination and decision-making is required.

C. Focused commitment to schedules and promptness are preferred and valued – but we don't forget we are dealing with people and special circumstances.

C. Focused commitment to people as potential sources of new ideas are preferred and valued – but we don't forget the need for meeting our goals within realistic time frames.

D. Carefully structured and timed agendas decided before meetings are critical for the best outcome, although new points can be added with the consensus of everyone.

D. Key issues as starting points and evolving agendas during meetings are critical for the best outcome, although the need to make the best use of time available is clearly recognised.

E. The best project plans are produced when everyone agrees to a plan which is executed in detail, but, of course, we are open to taking new inputs, ideas and circumstances into consideration.

E. The best project plans are produced when everyone agrees to an informal plan which evolves according to new inputs, circumstances and ideas, but, of course, we will always keep track of the progress of the project towards its goals.

F. To be successful in teamwork we need to concentrate and be focused on pre-agreed goals and work methods, changing these only when it is essential.

F. To be successful in teamwork we need to be open to new possibilities and be receptive to the need to change direction and methodology if this will help us achieve our goals.

G. Useful information is mainly acquired through presentations, formal exchange sessions, written communication or internal communication systems – although informal channels are also useful.

G. Useful information is mainly acquired through informal verbal communication between trusted colleagues and contacts – although formal channels are also useful.

H. Being late for an appointment among colleagues should not be tolerated because lateness is a clear sign of disrespect – but, of course, there are always exceptional circumstances.

H. Being late for an appointment with colleagues can be tolerated because it is based on an understanding that priorities change, preventing us from being together at the same time – but, of course, the intention is always to be on time if possible.

Where do you see 'them'?

A. When working on projects, it is most preferable to discuss each point in detail and systematically although recognising it is important not to be inflexible.

A. When working on projects, it is preferable to discuss each point generally responding to changing priorities although recognising it is important not to be inconclusive or vague.

B. It is critical to find the one critical path to achieve. Objectives and therefore advanced planning is an essential investment and sequential activities emphasised, but there is recognition that this should not be too rigid.

B. There are various paths to help achieve and therefore options should be kept open for as long as possible and parallel activities emphasised, but there is recognition that coordination and decision making is required.

C. Focused commitment to schedules and priorities are preferred and valued - but we don't forget we are dealing with people and special circumstances.

C. Mixed commitment to people or potential sources of new ideas are preferred and valued - but we don't forget the need for meeting our goals within realistic time frames.

D. Carefully structured and timed agendas decided before meetings are critical for the best outcome, although new points can be added with the consensus of everyone.

D. Key issues as starting points and working agendas during meetings are critical for the best outcome, although the need to make the best use of time available is clearly recognised.

E. The best project plans are produced when everyone agrees to a plan which is executed in detail, but, of course, we are open to taking new inputs, ideas and circumstances into consideration.

E. The best project plans are produced when everyone agrees to an informal plan which evolves according to new inputs, circumstances and ideas, but, of course, we will always keep track of the progress of the project towards its goals.

F. To be successful in teamwork we need to concentrate and be focused on pre-agreed goals and work methods, changing these only when it is essential.

F. To be successful in teamwork we need to be open to new possibilities and be receptive to the need to change direction and methodology if this will help us achieve our goals.

G. Useful information is mainly acquired through presentations, formal exchange sessions, written communication or internal communication systems - although informal channels are also useful.

G. Useful information is mainly acquired through informal verbal communication between trusted colleagues and contacts - although formal channels are also useful.

H. Being late for an appointment among colleagues should not be tolerated because someone is a clear sign of disrespect - but, of course, there are always exceptional circumstances.

H. Being late for an appointment with colleagues can be tolerated because it is based on an understanding that priorities change, preventing us from being together at the same time - but, of course, the intention is always to be on time if possible.

Strategies

→ Ideas to apply the learnings in real life

THE FIP
CHART
EXERCISE

WHERE IS THE MODEL'S
FOOTAGE

CLAPSTOCK
MORE ABOUT THE/NEW CONTENT

Spent time together to understand each other's culture

Use some time for other cultural events and

Know your own cultural values

Cultural Background

have some models
to help understand in life

"Take yourself"
to know if you are comfortable

Check/Review
yourself

use some understanding to become more positive

Share some stories or experiences from the past

Exercise
with people the values are good change of perspective

Get the information about the culture

Reflect on communication patterns

Try to be honest
when in a group setting

Strategy

Be honest and transparent

Use positive
communication

Silence is gold - one minute of your time

- iceberg
- what has most surprised you
- what are you taking away
- 1 thing you like to do when back in "real life"

As have that people from UK are going to and the 2
challenging

In their material/visual information
facts and best part

There are existing models on culture &
communication

There are many different models of perceptions

The various models in understanding CULTURE

Don't not that "no answer"
the 3 thought...

People can succeed

Some types are not so bad than I thought it is worth to invest time to understand each other

Coconuts
Peaches

I wish more about cultural change

How fit was the course for your purpose?

INC - GATE - 99

find out more about cultural drivers

new, culture
aspects (model) is representation

1. What is the purpose of the study?
 2. What are the research objectives?
 3. What is the significance of the study?

Spencer
1890

1. Agave americana
 2. Agave americana
 3. Agave americana
 4. Agave americana

present and exercises appropriate to the needs of world

get inspired for culture journals

Most new people

Find out more about CULTURE

LEARN SOMETHING NEW!

CURIOUS about Culture
History/History

SOMETHING PRACTICAL TO USE IN WHAT PLANE

and handle
better conflicts supposed to
based on culture
different ones

regain the throne
as the original owner shares
cultural influence.

Everything

Get everything

...and with the

Save money, save time, save stress.

Let  $\mathcal{F}_1, \mathcal{F}_2, \dots$

5

4

1

2

1

